A newly arrived feature titled "Café Anonymous" means that anybody can post their thoughts, opinions and questions whilst keeping your identity disclosed. Helpful for people who are shy or too embarrassed to ask a question. A Recent topic circling our Assyrian Café forums which was put to the community by princ3ss... "why are we asking God questions?" Not a lot was said about Princ3ss question .However Playaa did admit he doesn't have a clue and Chicago-girl said "loool...health classes". Princ3ss will appreciate a lot more views on this issue. Go to "questions & answers" and help princ3ss out.

Another question put to the Assyrian Café community by Mary. She asked "is it wrong to marry someone from the middle-east?" Chicago-Girl said in response to Mary's question "nope...nothing wrong with it as long as you meet him/her in person...eye contact". On the other hand Playaa said "both choices are bad, who said it's cool to go grab sum next girl that grew up in a totally different world". Later on Playaa did comment that "it's just hard to fit with ppl from other cultures" Princ3ss posted an interesting remark by saying "I second that how can u marry someone you just metttt?" Go to Questions & Answers and click onto "is it wrong to marry someone from the middle-east" and share your thoughts. The Site Admin Assyrian asked the Café community through a poll "do you think that the Iraq war is hurting Assyrians" A majority of voters suggested that a lot of Assyrians have already left Iraq. As the results stand today 83% of the Café community believes that yes Assyrians are being hurt in the Iraq war. However a total of 8% believe it's not.
